ACCESS AND INSPECTION

CDC Home Inspections agrees to perform a visual inspection of the property, limited to readily accessible areas. The inspection will not involve moving furnishings, contents, fixtures, or appliances. If the property is occupied, the CLIENT understands that some areas may not be visible or accessible for inspection.

Home inspections are conducted by generalists with clearly defined limitations. The inspection will be performed onsite, and additional time should be allowed. Please note, this inspection does not include any warranties or guarantees.

The inspection methodology is based on visual observation, non-destructive testing, measurements, and documentation of conditions that extend beyond tolerable change. While photos are not required, they may be used to document relevant findings.

Home inspections are not code-compliance inspections and do not include research, such as determining property boundaries, easements, or permits. This inspection does not substitute for the Transfer Disclosure Statement, which sellers are required to provide under Civil Code. In accordance with the Arizona Standards of Practice for Professional Home Inspectors, CDC Home Inspections does not evaluate or endorse any components that are not visually accessible.

The CLIENT understands that defects or deficiencies may exist in concealed areas such as under insulation, in inaccessible attics, inside wall and ceiling cavities, beneath floors, or underground. Latent or concealed defects are excluded from this inspection.

Equipment, components, and systems will not be dismantled except for those that a property owner would typically disassemble as part of normal maintenance (i.e., air filter access panels in heating and cooling systems).

This report is based on the inspector's professional opinion and the Standards of Practice. Special notes in the report and verbal consultations are important. If the CLIENT chooses not to be present or is unable to attend the inspection's conclusion, CDC Home Inspections cannot be held responsible for any misunderstanding of the inspection's limitations or report content.

Arrangements for verbal consultation can be made. The CLIENT agrees that only written statements shall be relied upon.

Access to the property and all areas must be arranged by the CLIENT or their agent before the inspection. This includes all exterior doors, gates, attic and crawl space areas, and any mechanical devices (e.g., electric panels) that may be padlocked.

CDC Home Inspections is not responsible for turning electrical, gas, or water services on or off nor is CDC Home Inspections responsible for turning on a breaker that is in the off position at the time of the inspection. It is the CLIENT's responsibility to ensure that these services are activated before the inspection, and the CLIENT should confirm with the seller, owner's representative, or agent that the services and breakers are on prior to the inspection. The inspection begins upon the inspector's arrival at the property.

If any utilities, including valves and breakers, are off, CDC Home Inspections will proceed with inspecting the components that are accessible and in the on position and will complete the report. Arrangements can be made for a follow-up inspection once power, water, gas, and access are restored, for an additional fee.

DEFICIENCIES AND CONTRACTORS

During the inspection period, we will attempt to identify the condition of various components by analyzing and examining associated issues. Our observations will be documented to denote the need for further evaluation, repairs, maintenance, or replacement.

As a result, professionals or competent individuals may be required to utilize and apply other methods in order to determine the proximate cause and apply practical and real world knowledge in order to cure the deficiency or reduce the effects generated by the observation made. An accurate observation paired with prompt resolutions lead to a prolonged healthy building system.

We recommend hiring licensed individuals who are registered with the State of Arizona and who possess insurance and can provide warranties for their work. A good place to start is Arizona Registrar of Contractors Office (AZROC). <https://azroc.my.site.com/AZRoc/s/contractor-search>

Here you can look up licensed professionals or cross-reference recommended professionals. If the total value of the work which includes materials and labor exceed $1,000 combined, Arizona requires the contractor to be licensed. If the work proposed involves electrical, plumbing, heating and/or cooling, then a licensed contractor is required According to the AZROC.

Work cannot be split up into different phases to avoid exceeding the $1,000 materials and labor limit. This is done for your protection. We strongly recommend inspections on all work completed as a result of our findings and approval through negotiations with the sellers or buyers.

LEGAL ISSUES AND LIMITATIONS OF LIABILITY

CLIENT acknowledges that this inspection is not a guarantee or warranty regarding the condition, adequacy, or performance of the items and systems inspected. For additional protection, CLIENT is advised to consider obtaining coverage from a third-party warranty company, which can be arranged through consultation with a realtor or agent, only for items that do not have pre-existing conditions, as Warranty companies WILL NOT cover pre-existing conditions.

This report is the exclusive property of CDC Home Inspections and the client identified within. Clients may share this report with agents, family members, or sellers for informational purposes ONLY. Any use of this report by individuals or entities other than the named client for negotiations, purchase decisions, or other purposes is strictly prohibited without the express written consent of CDC Home Inspections. This report is non-transferable and may not be reproduced, redistributed, or retransmitted in any form without prior authorization from the assigned inspector.

By reviewing this report, the CLIENT acknowledges and agrees to these terms. For questions regarding the findings or recommendations, CLIENT may contact CDC Home Inspections directly at (800) 298-4250.

This report is not to be utilized in any transaction in which CDC Home Inspections is not directly involved. CDC Home Inspections holds no third-party obligations and will not discuss the contents of this report with anyone other than the CLIENT or the CLIENT'S authorized agent, unless agreed to in writing by the CLIENT. UTILITY SERVICES

It is the responsibility of the listing agent and the seller to ensure that all utilities remain "ON" for the duration of the listing until the property is sold.

CDC Home Inspections is not responsible for ensuring that water, gas, electrical, or any other utilities are turned on and accessible before our arrival. If the listing agent and/or seller fail to ensure that utilities are operational before the inspection, the inspector has the right to proceed with the inspection without further notice.

As the buyer, we recommend that you consult your agent or the seller to confirm that all appliances are functional and accessible prior to the inspection. This includes ensuring that pilot lights are lit and appliances are in working order.

If a re-inspection is required, a fee will be charged, not to exceed 50% of the original service fee.

PARALLEL STUDENTS

We are selective about who accompanies us during property inspections. As part of our ongoing efforts to grow our inspection brand, we will occasionally invite prospective inspectors or students to join us on site.

These individuals will conduct independent inspections but will not provide a written report.

The final report and the results you receive will come directly from CDC Home Inspections.

In accordance with the State of Arizona's Board of Technical Registration, an additional fee may be required for student inspectors. However, we have set this fee at $0.00.

You will not incur any additional charges for the presence of a student inspector.

INSPECTORS

All inspectors working with CDC Home Inspections, whether employed (W-2 status) or self-employed (1099 status), have been thoroughly trained by CDC Home Inspections.

We are highly discerning about the inspectors who represent the CDC Brand. We do not accept outside inspectors who have not completed a minimum of 3-6 months of training directly under our owner, Darrell.

CDC Home Inspections is fully licensed and insured above Arizona's State Minimum Requirements. Employees may be covered under our Business Owners Policy (BOP) through our parent company, Contractor Dispatch Center.

Subcontracted inspectors (1099 status) are also licensed and insured beyond Arizona's state minimum requirements, with E&O (Errors & Omissions) and GL (General Liability) coverage. Contractor Dispatch Center, LLC doing business as CDC Home Inspections, is listed as the certificate holder in the event a claim is made regarding an inspection.

If a subcontracted inspector fails to maintain their insurance, we will be immediately notified by the insurance carrier. The inspector will be removed from assignments until their policy is confirmed as active and reinstated, which is verified both over the phone and via email.

MOST FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

(Q): How long is the inspection?

(A): Each inspection varies. We recommend calling Darrell 1 hour into the inspection. Generally, a standard inspection takes 2-3 hours.

(Q): When do I show up to the inspection?

(A): We recommend hiring licensed contractors. Arizona has strict requirements on who performs repairs. We recommend that after repairs are performed, you request a re-inspection. Our inspections are generally 29% of the original fee. (e.g. Original Inspection $525/ Re-Inspection $150)

(A): Yes. Customers are customers for life. We try to help as much as possible.
